

The Best of the Private Clubs

Best Overall Country Club

VAQUERO GOLF CLUB

Forget about the fact that more than a half dozen PGA Tour pros have joined Vaquero. That is not the reason why the club is the best in the area.

What sets Vaquero apart from every other club is its service. Rather, its commitment to service. Everyone on staff is committed to making members of Vaquero feel like they are worth a million dollars, which is likely, given that a membership costs $75,000 and you have to buy a lot (with prices ranging from $200,000 to well over $1,000,000) in order to even get a membership.

Yes, the golf course is special. The Tom Fazio-designed course may not be the absolute best in the area, but it is always in great condition, is very easy to walk and the layout can be very challenging, even for someone who has conquered Shinnecock Hills at the U.S. Open (yes, Corey Pavin is a member).

And the practice facilities are first-rate. The driving range is two-sided, allowing players to practice in the wind of their choice. The short game area is kept in as pristine condition as the golf course. And the amenities on the range are also unequalled. Titleist ProV1's are the balls of choice; Vaquero also has the latest and greatest golf equipment available to demo; and there is always someone at the range ready to clean your clubs.

Although the clubhouse is not scheduled to open until November, the folks at Vaquero are still committed to making the club a social hub for the neighborhood.

For example, adjacent to the golf course is a stocked lake with a fishing camp run by the legendary fisherman Buddy Brown. Current record for the lake is a nine-pound bass caught by PGA Tour pro Ben Crane.

Everything at Vaquero is top-notch, from their world-class food to their impeccable service. But the best thing about Vaquero isn't anything tangible; it's the ambience.

There is an incredible camaraderie between the members, and it's the ultimate way a neighborhood should be, with all families living harmoniously with the ultimate playground in the middle.

Ozzie and Harriet would love to live at Vaquero.

That is, if they had a million dollars.

